Săracă inima mè

by Steve Wilson in the July 26, 2005 issue

-outside Biertan, Romania

Hush, my heart. There is still the light through the windows, fields that remember you. Past the yellow church beside the forest, hush. I've had to learn the ease of waiting. Somewhere, in autumns, the songs grow surer with waiting. You cannot hurry through hurt. Quiet. Still. Slow, like those swallows along the rooftops. Color upon a shawl.

World, loving its long evenings in silence.