Bleeding heart

by Paul Willis in the April 27, 2016 issue

(Dicentra formosa)

Finally, a flower after my own. You there, hanging in unashamed bivalve clusters at the feet of ancient cedars.

So few of them left, you know.

Is that what breaks you? Is that what makes you wear your sweet pink ventricles on your green sleeve?

—Rockport State Park