Friday digest

March 30, 2012

Subscribe by RSS feed: magazine, blogs, news. See all feeds.

New today from the Century:

- Terra Brockman misses winter: "Driving through a mini-snowstorm, I thought I might see a snowbow. But it never materialized--and once again, none of the snow stuck." (subscription required)
- John Buchanan on longing for certainty: "Seekers often want Christianity to be a set of ideas one knows to be true, or at least to provide a feeling of certainty." (subscription required)
- Janet Potter on the Hunger Games contradiction: "On screen you don't get nearly as much of Katniss's horror and reluctance to participate. You do, however, get exciting fights."
- Steve Thorngate on MPAA ratings

In the news:

- Dalai Lama awarded 2012 Templeton Prize
- Before politics, Mitt Romney was a Mormon bisho
- Mississippi, Vermont score at opposite ends of religious spectrum