Wednesday digest

September 12, 2012

Subscribe by RSS feed: magazine, blogs, news. See all feeds.

New today from the Century:

- Beth Felker Jones on Snow White's revival: "Several current tales of Snow White nod at feminist critique—while leaving the old paradigms for female power and beauty intact."
- John Buchanan on speaking of money: "My files are full of stewardship sermons. So it came as a shock when people would say, 'We know you don't like to talk about money.'"
- Thomas Lynch reviews David McGlynn (subsription required)
- Bromleigh McCleneghan on failure, blame and the Chicago Public Schools
- Steve Thorngate on the anniversary of JFK's speech to the Houston ministers

In the news:

- U.S. Muslims worry about fall-out from Libya attacks
- Email prompts Mormon church to reaffirm that it's neutral on Mitt Romney