

Tuesday digest

October 30, 2012

Subscribe by RSS feed: magazine, blogs, news. See all feeds.

New today from the Century:

- Rodney Clapp's personal soundtrack: "After school, I was milking the cow and listening to the radio when I heard a menacing baritone intone the words, 'I shot a man in Reno just to watch him die.' It made an impression." (subscription required)
- Diane Roth on visiting her dad at the nursing home
- Steve Thorngate highlights more evidence that the agricultural system is a mess
- Heidi Neumark's lectionary column for Sunday, November 11 (subscription required)

In the news:

- Activists say religion is key in combating female genital mutilation
- Looking for an undecided voter? Check the pulpit
- Obama endorses gay marriage push in Washington, Maine
- Top Southern Baptist official breaks pledge, endorses Romney
- Who is most likely to stray? Christians and Jews