Thursday digest

August 22, 2013

Subscribe by RSS feed: magazine, blogs, news. See all feeds.

New today from the Century:

- Bromleigh McCleneghan on Antoinette Tuff, who saw a gunman as a human being
- Brian Doyle on his first encounter with a Protestant: "The Protestant was sitting alone at a table in the far corner. I assumed it was because no one else spoke Protestant."
- David Heim remembers Jeffrey Gros
- Lil Copan on artwork by Pamela Chatterton-Purdy (subsription required)

In the news:

- Benedict XVI: 'God told me' to resign
- Feds offer atheists a clergy tax break that they don't want