Wednesday digest

September 18, 2013

Subscribe by RSS feed: magazine, blogs, news. See all feeds.

New today (and yesterday) from the Century:

- Stephanie Paulsell on emergency prayer: "When a man with an AK-47 entered her school, Antoinette Tuff prayed—and convinced the man to lay his weapon down." (subscription required)
- Nicole Kirk on God's long summer of national commemorations
- Jason Byassee on Animate: "The teachers in this video series are excellent.
  But I'm not sure that the cumulative impact is excellent." (subscription required)
- Why Carol Howard Merritt refuses to use the word "mainline" any longer
- o David Williams on being the shabbos goy on Yom Kippur
- Steve Thorngate on college rankings
- John Stendahl's lectionary column for Sunday, September 29 (subscription required)
- Lou Carlozo on Mumford & Sons (subscription required)
- o A brief review of N. T. Wright
- o "Gone to grace," a poem by Sydney Lea

In the news:

- o As denominations decline, numbers of unpaid ministers rise
- For Navy yard shooter, Buddhism was a temporary refuge