

Marram grass:
Indiana Dunes National Park

by Julie L. Moore in the May 5, 2021 issue

I know what you've heard:
Build on rock, so when rain pours down, you will not fall.

I'm a prickly enigma.
I build my tin-green home
on this sand because we are friends.

Believe it or not,
my foundation is stable.
My rhizomes cement my footer and multiply my kind all down the line.

My architecture's ingenious:
my reedy, inrolled leaves store water and catch the great lake's wind.

I am a wonder,
and welcoming, sharing the wealth atop this dune, inviting other colonies to join me. I am no fool:

while I bask in the sun, I hold this whole community together.
