

Starry Solomon's plume

by Paul Willis in the January 6, 2016 issue

Starry, starry Solomon's plume, your constellations float in clusters lowly wise, zig-zagging asterisks of light, reminding thick and shaggy cedars, though they breach the nether skies, that even smallest things may be arrayed on earth as they are in heaven.

—North Cascades National Park