New today from the Century:

- Stanley Hauerwas reviews Eleonore Stump: "It takes a lifetime, as well as a remarkable life, to write a book like Wandering in Darkness." (subscription required)
- Amy Frykholm comments on the ArtPrize award in Grand Rapids: "Theologically, what does this piece of art evoke and why? To me, it suggests the religious aesthetics of a self-satisfied people."
- John Dart reports on the new group "We do! Methodists Living Marriage Equality."
- Bruce Epperly's lectionary column for Sunday, October 30: "As Gerald May notes in his description of the spiritual life, finding your way through the wilderness of life involves pausing, noticing, opening, stretching, yielding and, I would add, responding. But first we need to know that we're lost." (subscription required)
