

“And he looked around at them with anger . . .”

by Todd Sukany in the March 11, 2020 issue

—Mark 3:5 ESV

Fifty-nine translations in English.

Four recuse Jesus from anger, selecting indignation, furios, ka'as, wrath instead. Anything to keep Jesus from anger.

These gospels pierce us until,
like making eye contact with panhandlers, we turn away.

And yet fifty-five times, the Son of God,
the Man of Sorrows, the One acquainted with grief, looks into everyone present.

Some feel the flash but one stands in silence—this nameless tree with no leaves for a breeze to flutter—follows the command and watches his dry hand bloom.