Museum

by Siobhan Drummond in the June 2024 issue Published on May 23, 2024

Who curated the pile of old shoes? The rusty hinges? Who decided on the cascade of dusty eyeglasses, barely glinting, now blank, blind?

How could that person not have wept at first sight, not stand there weeping uncontrollably?

Surely there was a committee. Did they all weep? Together or individually? Some of them blatantly, right in the middle of the decision-making process.

Others later, at home, in the privacy of their kitchens, standing in front of their ovens.

Others maybe only in their hearts, or not at all yet.